Mayor Jacobsen's Message

Mayor Larry Jacobsen

September marks National Preparedness Month. Preparing for emergencies and disasters can keep yourself, your families, and your neighborhoods safe.

How many different emergency and disaster situations can you think of? Here are a few; flooding, fire, severe weather (wind, precipitation, extreme heat and cold), earthquakes, landslides, hazardous materials, terrorism ... I'm sure that I missed some. How do we prepare for these events? Part of being prepared for an emergency means making a plan to mitigate the potential impact on services that we normally take for granted. Many of those critical services, including culinary water, sewer, stormwater, and roads, are provided by Nibley City. Because our entire community depends on these services, Nibley City's first priority in an emergency is to protect the equipment and infrastructure that provide these services. Nibley City is also committed to aiding other service providers in an emergency. For example, the city might help provide electrical power at designated emergency shelters.

Even with the city's help, the foundation of emergency preparedness is self-sufficiency. If each of us prepares ourselves and our families for a disaster, our community will better survive and recover from an incident. It is important to have a family emergency plan and a 72-hour kit for every member of your family.

Coordinating the emergency response of Nibley City with the emergency response of individuals requires a way to share information, and that deserves special attention in our preparations. If cellular and internet services are available, Nibley City will share information on its website and through social media. Nibley City and Cache County will help coordinate an emergency response through a "reverse 911" program called Code Red. Here is a simplified link where you can sign up for that service [https://tinyurl.com/Cache-Code-Red]. If there is no internet and cellular service, Cache County will broadcast emergency information over good, old-fashioned radio at WQKB, 1610 AM. Nibley City employees have two-way, FCC-licensed radios for use in emergencies, and volunteer citizens within Nibley have organized an amateur radio network as well. Many thanks to them.

We have an incredibly strong community, as shown by our cooperative efforts during past emergencies. I am proud to live in a community that takes care of each of its members, especially when it is needed the most.

Please call, text, or write anytime. Thanks.

—Larry

Advice From Our Emergency Manager

Chris Searle
Emergency Manager
chris@nibleycity.com

Emergencies often occur without warning and may require you to act quickly. Some emergencies may force you to leave your home or neighborhood, or you may be asked to shelter in place. A major disaster could leave thousands without food, water, or shelter. You may be without basic services such as gas, electricity, or telephone for an unknown period.

By preparing you can remain calm, safe, and be able to take care of yourself and your loved ones during a disaster. The outcome can be influenced by the tools and plans you have in place. Planning is always a great way to improve an outcome, but keep in mind emergencies often don't occur as you anticipated. The following points are good to remember during any disaster:

- Be Prepared • Stay Calm • Remain Flexible
- Follow instructions of trained personnel

You should make a family emergency plan and include the following items in your plan.

- Conduct annual safety drills at your home and at work. Prepare for various types of emergencies. Identify safe spots in each room for different situations. For example, during an earthquake you should take cover under tables, desks, and against interior walls.
- Escape Routes: Think about and know the various emergency exits and alternate escape routes at the places where you frequently go; home, work, church, school, etc.
- Talk to your employer and your children's school about emergency plans. How they will communicate with families during an emergency? Talk to your neighbors working together. Make special arrangements for children or adults with disabilities. Be certain your family plan includes the needs of all members of your household and pets.
- Identify meeting places outside of your home and neighborhood and create a plan to get away if you must leave. Plan how you will assemble your family and where you will go if you must evacuate your home. Choose several destinations in different directions so you will have options. Keep at least a half of tank of gas in your vehicle and become familiar with alternative forms of transportation.
- Develop a Family Communications Plan so if your family is not all together when a disaster strikes, you will know how to contact each other. Review with your family what you will do under various emergency situations. Create a plan where everyone knows how to contact each other through phone/text/email. Having an out-of-town person for all family members to contact in case local phone lines are not operational, is a wise strategy.

Remember, the foundation of emergency preparedness is self-sufficiency. If each of us takes the responsibility of preparing ourselves and our families for a disaster, it will significantly increase our community's ability to survive and recover from an incident.
